

You see two major powers, India and China emerging, and we would hope they would emerge also as human rights leaders. India has a long tradition of democracy, India has human rights institutions, the rule of law, India should play a more active, proactive role both on the international stage and domestically in pushing forward the human rights agenda.